Read-only mandate

Sign in with your own account. Use Help for this reference. Your authorized audit, finance and evidence views are read-only. You cannot create or change a project, assignment, availability, approval, invoice, payment, closeout or security setting on behalf of another person. A link in Activity Inbox opens only a source you are allowed to read.

Trace a record

Start with the displayed project, period, identifier and state. Open the source record and compare its dates, actor, version and attached evidence. In Audit, filter the append-only event list to inspect who changed what and when. A missing event or denied record must be reported, not recreated. An approved time record, customer signoff, issued invoice and confirmed payment are separate facts; never infer one from another.

Financial and document evidence

In authorized Finance Overview, Billing, Collections / Ledger and Accounting views, reconcile a summary to its source rows and effective dates. In Cash calendar, distinguish expected collection or scheduled settlement from actual payment. Financial documents may have their own restricted access and scan state. A generated PDF snapshot is immutable history; a newer corrected document does not erase it.

Calendars and workforce privacy

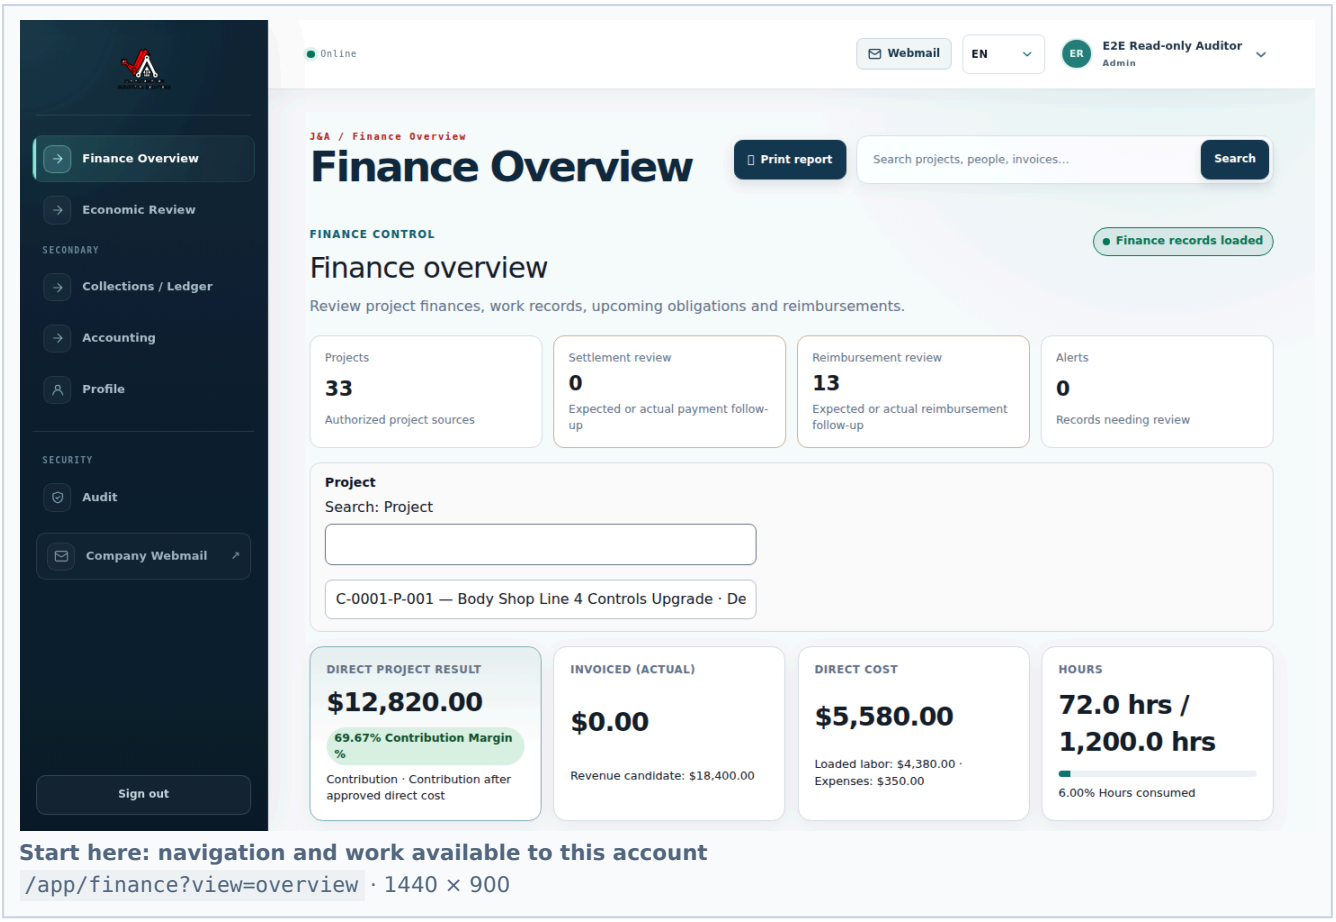

Project or planning dates in a read-only view provide context, not authority to publish or edit. A selected calendar day and agenda may lead to an authorized source record. Do not use unavailable edit controls or a different person's session. Availability windows are not actual hours, and planned work is not proof of performed work. If a record falls outside your authorization, request a scoped review from the Owner.

Reporting a discrepancy

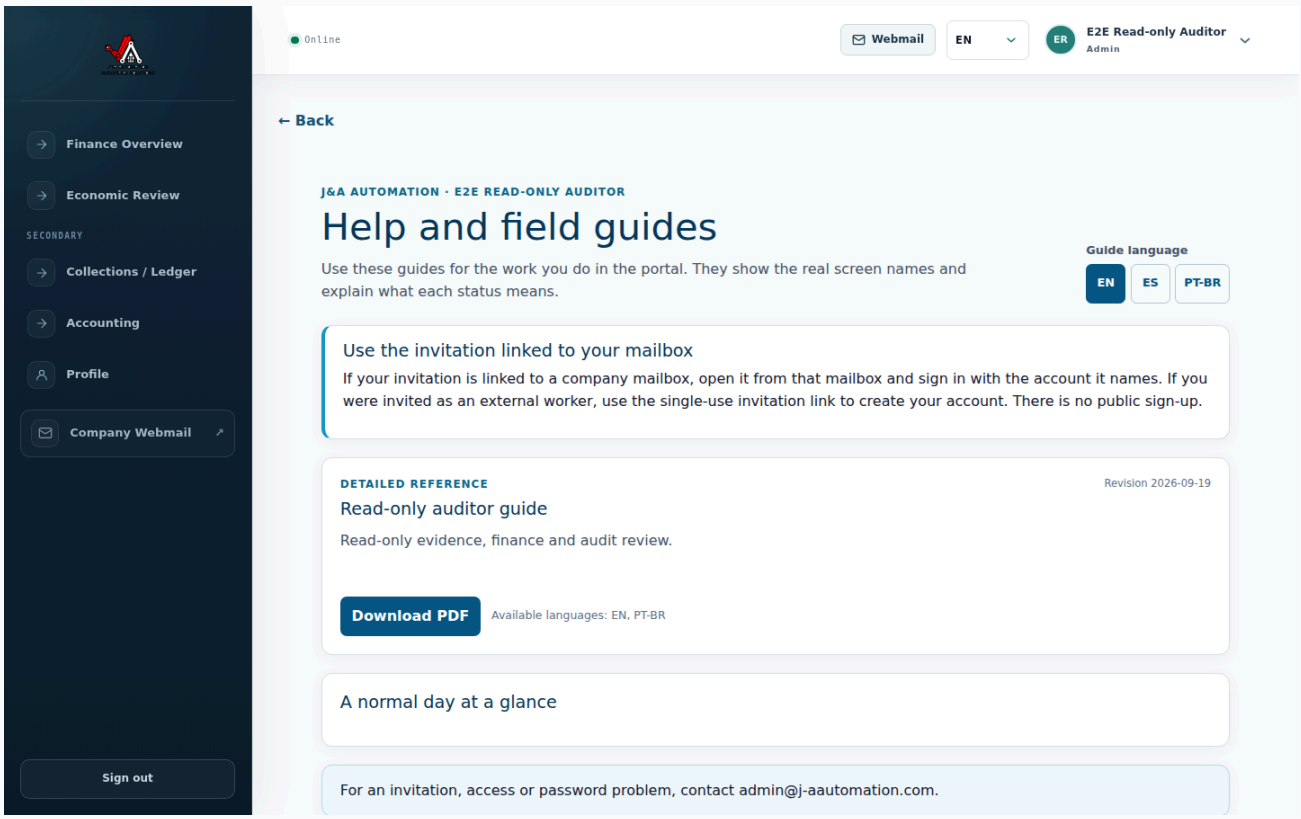

Record the identifier, date, displayed status and specific inconsistency through the verified audit/support route. Do not submit test approvals, payments or corrections to inspect behavior. If a view is denied or a document is quarantined, preserve that state in your finding instead of bypassing it.
